MAY TRANSPORT LIQUOR IN INTER-STATE TRAFFIC

Virginia Law, Judge Says, Does Not Make Unlawful Carrying Whisky Through Commonwealth.

COURT DECIDES BROWN CASE

Accused Negro Caught On Way to Georgia With 150 Quarts in Machine-Is Held That Legislature Recognized Limitations.

DANVILLE. VA., June 21.—Judge E. Walton Brown, of the Corporation Court, this morning handed down a voluminous opinion on the case of the Commonwealth against Thomas Cobbs, a negro, who was arrested here last March while pitoting a roadster from Baltimore to Georgia, the machine containing 150 quarts of liquor.

Judge Brown holds that the shipment of ardent spirits from one State, through the State of Virginia to another State, is not a violation of the Webb-Kenyon or the Reed bone dry law. He cites sections of the law, explains them, and also cites the case of the State of Virginia against Luchesi.

Cites Cobbs Case.

Citen Cobin Cane.

Citen Cobbs Case.

After reciting the facts in the Cobbs case, these being agreed to by the Commonwealth in order to eliminate the taking of evidence, the court says:

"It therefore, follows that, inasmuch as the agreed facts show that the liquor was not to be used in violation of the laws of this State, and there had been no commingling of such liquor with the property of this State, the Webb-Kenyon law has no application and no effort to change the general rule that the State may not regulate commerce wholly interstate. The General Assembly of Virginia evidently recognized this limitation upon its power, for by the terms of the prohibitory law, which is very comprehensive and which his been several times amended, it is not expressly made unlawful to transport ardent spirits from without the State, through the State to another point without the State."

In discharging the accused negro from custedy and exonerating him of any crime the court states further:

Leaves Evasion Avenue. Leaves Evasion Avenue.

Leaves Evasion Avenue.

"It is true that this state of the law leaves open an avenue of evasion for bootleggers to ply their trade by automobile under the guise of interstate traffic through the State, and however much this situation is to be deplored, this case is decided as it must be on its particular facts. In cases of transportation by automobile it will not be sufficient for the defendant to claim that he is going through the State, for under the laws of Virginia, as in the Luchesi case, when the accused is found in the possession of more than one quart of ardent spirits the burden is upon him to prove that he intends to make and at the time of his arrest was making, a continuous journey from a point without this State through this State to another point without this State. And it may be added if the evidence discloses that the liquor was intended by any person interested therein to be received, possessed sold or in any manner used in violation of any provision of the prohibitory law of Virginia, such transportation, though interstate, would not be protected."

VIRGINIA POSTMASTERS FORM INSURANCE SOCIETY of Association is to Provide Fund for Payment of Death Benefits.

Postmaster Thornton stated yesterday that plans have been completed for the establishment of a brench of the Virginia Postmasters' Association, to be known as the Virginia Postmasters association, to be known as the Virginia Postmasters Beneficial Association. The object of the organization is to provide a fund for the payment of death beneficial association. Membership is confined exclusively to postmasters and superintendents of stations, and membership ceases when the insured becomes separated from his official position. Unique features are that no medical examination is required and there is no age limit. A large number of the postmasters of the State have expressed a desire to become members of the beneficial association.

The plan was proposed by Post:

master Thornton at the recent convention of the Virginia Postmasters Association, at Roanoke, and the convention unanimously voted to put it into effect. Postmaster Thornton has been made chairmain of the trustees of the association.
